TEXT I

Heroes are not new. Every age produces its quota of individuals who distinguish themselves from other members of their community by some superior achievement. Their praise serves as an inspiration for others to follow their example. The image of the hero is that of an individual who embodies a virtue to the highest degree. That virtue may be courage, wisdom, or faith but it is always a personal attribute that is made evident by the hero's achievements. The hero does not strive for recognition. The motivation for his actions cannot be egoistical or he would not be a true hero.

16) The most important aspect of the definition of a hero is _____.

- a) achievement
- b) wisdom
- c) recognition
- d) egoism

17) A hero must create a desire in others to _____.

- a) ignore his virtues
- b) think he is a new kind of man
- c) follow his example
- d) recognize him regardless of anything he does
